Potsdam Center for Policy and Management (PCPM)

Expertise for the Public Sector

As one of the leading competence centers for the public sector in Germany, the PCPM

- promotes advanced research in national, international and comparative perspectives on topics such as Governance, Public Policy and Organization of Administration,
- provides innovative study programs with cutting-edge knowledge and practice, offering students the frameworks to meet the challenges of managing public policies, and
- features outstanding interdisciplinary co-operation by University of Potsdam professors such as Werner Jann (PCPM Speaker), Thomas Edeling, Harald Fuhr, Steffen Ganghof, Klaus H. Goetz, and Isabella Proeller.

Dear Colleagues,

I am delighted to be able to welcome you to the 5th ECPR General Conference here at the University of Potsdam on 10-12 September 2009.

The University of Potsdam is the largest research institution in a city that prides itself on having the highest density of academic and scientific facilities in Germany. The campus site at Griebnitzsee, where the General Conference 2009 is held, has just been transformed by the addition of a new building, in which most of our events take place.

The Faculty of Economics and Social Sciences, which acts as our host, focuses on public policy and public management (broadly understood). It offers BA degrees in political science and public administration, sociology and economics as well as a range of postgraduate degrees, including a Master of Public Management, a Master of Global Public Policy, a Master of European Governance and Administration (offered in cooperation with ENA and Sorbonne in Paris and Humboldt-University in Berlin), and an Executive Master of Public Management with the Hertie School of Governance in Berlin.

But beyond offering the comforts of a generously refurbished campus, the conference location at Potsdam also serves as a stark reminder of the turbulent history that is the backdrop of modern-day European politics:

From the Edict of Potsdam in 1685 through ending religious discrimination and the reign of Frederick the Great whose summer residence Sanssouci became almost synonymous with European enlightenment, through dark moments of Germany's history like the handshake between President Hindenburg and Chancellor Hitler on the 'Day of Potsdam' in 1933, until the fall of the Berlin Wall that separated Potsdam from neighbouring (West) Berlin for 40 years, the city of Potsdam - UNESCO world heritage site since 1990 – has been in the centre European history, which you can witness at numerous sites in and around the city.

Finally I do not want to finish without thanking all those involved in preparing and organising this conference, here in Potsdam and in the ECPR's Central Services – without your great work none of this would have been possible!

We all hope you will enjoy your stay at the University of Potsdam and the unique sites this city and region have to offer.

*Klaus H. Goetz
Local Organiser, ECPR General Conference 2009*

CONVENORS & ORGANISERS

The Academic Convenors

Martin Bull is Academic Director of the ECPR and Editor of the ECPR's journal of the profession, European Political Science (EPS). # THE UNIVERSITY OF POTSDAM

The University of Potsdam was founded in 1991. Its current enrolment is 20,000, 10 percent of which are foreign students. The University of Potsdam is the largest institution of higher education in the state of Brandenburg and is the most beautifully situated of all academic institutions in Germany.

It has developed into an address for modern research and instruction, as well as a well-developed network for the flow and exchange of information between the academic, scientific, and business sectors. Five faculties form the pillars of the university: the Philosophical Faculty, the Faculty of Life Sciences, the Faculty of Mathematics and Natural Sciences, the Faculty of Economics and Social Sciences, and the Law Faculty. Numerous external institutions in the region, especially those in the area of natural science, give the university its unique profile.

New, practically-oriented and interdisciplinary courses of study, such as polymer science, Jewish studies, administration, the geosciences, nutrition, and patholinguistics, are trademarks of the university which make them attractive both in Germany and abroad. The teacher training program is a further area that stands out in the university's offerings. Great care is also set on providing a comprehensive set of services in the areas of language learning, computers, as well as culture and sports, all of which are accessible to the entire student body.

ABOUT THE ECPR

European Consortium for Political Research

The European Consortium for Political Research (ECPR) is an independent, scholarly association, established in 1970. It supports and encourages the training, research and cross-national co-operation of political scientists throughout Europe and beyond. The ECPR currently has nearly 350 European institutional members and associate members in over 40 countries, from as far afield as New Zealand and Japan. These members together form a network of many thousands of individual political scientists, international relations and European studies specialists.

activities include:

- Organising workshops, roundtables, conferences and summer schools
- Publishing journals, books, articles and newsletters
- Providing a comprehensive information source for political scientists through its website, electronic bulletins and online searchable databases

who can become a member?

Any university, college, or department of any scholarly institution in Europe engaged in teaching and research in political science may apply for full membership of the Consortium. Non European institutions of similar status are eligible to become associate members.

Membership of the ECPR is institutional rather than individual. This means that any individual (of post graduate status and above) from any department in a member institution may participate in ECPR activities.

All information about ECPR activities is available on the ECPR web site: www.ecprnet.org

benefits of ecpr membership:

The biggest benefit of membership is in being part of a large network of academics with related research interests. However, members are also entitled to:

- participate (without paying a conference fee) in the annual Joint Sessions of Workshops. Full members may apply to direct a workshop at the Joint Sessions; associate members may apply to co-direct a workshop. Full members are eligible to receive a reimbursement as a contribution towards their travel and per diem costs.
- participate, at reduced rates, in the General Conference ECPR members may apply to be a section/panel chair at the conference.
- apply for the mobility fund for graduate students who wish to participate in any ECPR activities, i.e. Joint Sessions of Workshops, General and Graduate Conferences and summer schools.
- organise a standing (research) group; associate members can co-direct a standing group. All members are encouraged to join and play a full part in any of the ECPR standing groups.
- participate in ECPR sponsored summer schools at reduced rates.
- receive a free subscription to the ECPR journals, European Journal of Political Research (EJPR), European Political Science Review (EPSR) and European Political Science (EPS).
- receive a discount on books published by ECPR Press, Palgrave Macmillan, Routledge and Oxford University Press, as well as discounts on Palgrave Macmillan journals and all books and personal subscriptions to journals published by Blackwell or Polity Press.

CONFERENCE HIGHLIGHTS

Roundtable

"Should European Politics Degrees share a Common Core Syllabus?"

Thursday 10 September, 11.00-12.40 - Room H 05

An undergraduate degree in "politics" from a European university may take many forms. They range from "political science" degrees with a substantial component of qualitative and quantitative research methodologies, through to "political studies" degrees with history, law or philosophy at their core, eschewing "science" altogether. Against the background of ever-increasing staff and student mobility on the one hand, and developments of the Bologna process towards accreditation and quality assurance on the other, does this matter? Does our academic discipline of "politics" need a shared vision of a common core for all European politics degrees?

Chair: Richard Topf, London Metropolitan University

Participants: JACQUI BRIGGS, University of Lincoln
HANS-DIETER KLINGEMANN, Social Science Research Centre, Berlin/ Simon Fraser University

Roundtable:

"Question Time! Constitutional & Electoral Reform in the ECPR"

Thursday 10 September, 14.00-15.40 Room H 05

Following the events in Lisbon when there was a shortage of candidates to be elected to the new ECPR Executive Committee, the ECPR Council proposed that an Electoral and Constitutional Reform Group be established to consider ways of improving the governance of the ECPR, and especially the procedures it adopts for electing Executive Committee members. As part of the process of consultation and discussion of this matter, the Academic Convenors of the ECPR's General Conference at Potsdam decided to hold a Roundtable on ECPR Electoral and Constitutional Reform, whose model will be based on the BBC's famous television programme, "Question Time". ECPR members are therefore warmly invited to attend this session where they will be in a position to ask the views and opinions of a selection of their learned colleagues on any issues pertinent to the subject matter, at the same time as having the opportunity to express their own views and opinions. Copies of the ECPR Constitution will be made available at the Roundtable.

Chair: Martin Bull, University of Salford

Participants: IAN BUDGE, University of Essex
RUDY ANDEWEG, Leiden University

Plenary Roundtable Debate

" Post-Democracy or a New Democratic Moment?"

Thursday 10 September, 16.30 - Room: Lecture Hall (H 03 + H 04)

In 2004 Colin Crouch published a book entitled "Post-Democracy". The book and the term soon became popular beyond the small world of political science. Crouch argues that the "democratic moment", having occurred in the US slightly before and in Western Europe slightly after World War II, has passed long ago. Colin Crouch's book does not stand alone. It is aligned to a long tradition of theory driven literature which has diagnosed, deplored, and predicted the crisis and decline of democracy since the early 1970s.

Today, the global crisis of the financial markets seems to lead to a return of the active state. The neoliberal era of deregulation has come to a halt. Neo-Keynesianism is back, big governments start to reregulate markets. Democratic politics re-conquer territory which it lost to markets during the past three decades. If this is true a new democratic moment could emerge, empowering democratic politics against markets and business.

Chair: Wolfgang Merkel, Social Science Research Centre, Berlin

Participants: COLIN CROUCH, Warwick Business School
JOHN KEANE, Center for Democracy, The University of Westminster
PIPPA NORRIS, Harvard University
MANFRED G. SCHMIDT, Rupprecht-Karls-Universität Heidelberg
VIVIEN A. SCHMIDT, Boston University

Plenary Lecture

by John J. Mearsheimer (University of Chicago):

" From the Collapse of Communism to the Crisis of Capitalism: Twenty Years after the Fall of the Wall"

Friday 11 September, 18.00-19.00; Lecture Hall (H 03 + H 04)

[to be replaced by abstract of lecture rather than biography – awaiting information from J Mearsheimer]

Roundtable
" 2009 German Federal Elections"
Saturday 12 September, 14.00 - 15.40, Room: H 03

The German Federal elections will take place on 27 September 2009. After four years of governing together in a Grand Coalition, both the CDU/CSU – led by Chancellor Merkel – and the SPD – led by Foreign Minister Steinmeier – have declared that they do not wish to renew their coalition after the elections. But will election results permit a different coalition formula? And what will it look like? The Roundtable will look back at the experience of the Grand Coalition, consider the prospects of the main parties competing in the elections, discuss trends in electoral behaviour and shifts in the party system, and consider the implications of the Federal elections for the governance challenges that the country faces.

Chair: Klaus H. Goetz, University of Potsdam
Participants: THOMAS POGUNTKE, University of Bochum
ANDREA ROEMMELE, International University Bruchsal
SIGRID ROBTEUTSCHER, University of Frankfurt

Roundtable
" 2009 European Parliamentary Elections"
Saturday 12 September; 16.00 - 17.40 - Room: H 03

The discussion will focus on the results of the European Parliament's 2009 elections, with particular reference to their implications for the evolution and consolidation of parties at the European level and of their system. Prospects for electoral law reform, particularly along the lines suggested by British ELDR MEP Andrew Duff's proposal, will also be addressed.

Chair: Luciano Bardi, University of Pisa
Participants: GABOR TOKA, Central European University, Budapest
ANDREW DUFF, ELDR MEP
PETER MAIR, European University Institute, Florence
AMIE KREPPPEL, University of Florida

Lifetime Achievement Award

Gerhard Lehbruch is Emeritus Professor of Political Science at the University of Konstanz, Germany, and has been President of the German Political Science Association and Vice-president of the International Political Science Association.

After studying political science, history, and sociology in Paris and Tübingen from 1954-59, he received his doctor's degree in Tübingen in 1961, where he also habilitated in 1969. From 1969-1973 he worked as academic assistant and professor in Heidelberg, followed by professorships in Tübingen (1973-1978) and Konstanz (1978-1996).

His research focused on institutions, political regulation and comparative politics, including his studies on "negotiated democracy" and structural incongruence between federal state politics and party competition ('Strukturbruchthese'). In 2003, the German Political Science Association honoured him with the Theodor-Eschenburg-Prize for his lifetime achievements.

The Mattei Dogan Foundation Prize in European Political Sociology

As a founding father of the ECPR, Richard Rose has been one of the biggest names in political science and 'political sociology' since the late 1950s and early 1960s.

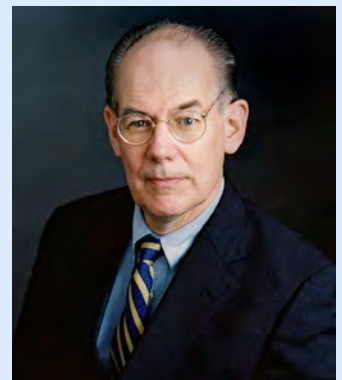

He has written frequently and across the range and has published on Northern Ireland, the United States, English and British Politics, and most recently post-Communist politics. He has been widely translated and served the profession across the world. His most recent publication, Parties and Elections in New European Democracies (with Neil Munro) was published by ECPR Press in April 2009.

ECPR General Conference Plenary Lecture

John J. Mearsheimer is the R. Wendell Harrison Distinguished Service Professor of Political Science and the co-director of the Program on International Security Policy at the University of Chicago, where he has taught since 1982. He graduated from West Point in 1970 and then served five years as an officer in the U.S. Air Force. He then started graduate school in political science at Cornell University in 1975. He received his Ph.D. in 1980. He spent the 1979-1980 academic year as a research fellow at the Brookings Institution, and was a post-doctoral fellow at Harvard University's Center for International Affairs from 1980 to 1982. During the 1998-1999 academic year, he was the Whitney H. Shepardson Fellow at the Council on Foreign Relations in New York.

Professor Mearsheimer has written extensively about security issues and international politics more generally. He has won a number of teaching awards: the Clark Award for Distinguished Teaching in 1977, and the Quantrell Award for Distinguished Teaching at the University of Chicago in 1985. In 2003, he was elected to the American Academy of Arts and Science.

SYMPOSIUM

Did it grow together what belonged together?

20 years after the fall of the Berlin Wall. German and European experiences

Organiser: HANS-DIETER KLINGEMANN
Social Science Research Center Berlin, Germany

The collapse of the Berlin Wall symbolized the end of the division of Germany and Europe. 20 years later it seems proper to evaluate the development of Germany after unification and of East West integration in Europe. Did it grow together what belonged together? At its General Conference in Potsdam the ECPR will discuss Willy Brandt's grand vision and hold a series of symposia focused on various aspects of this issue.

The following topics, representing historical, structural and cultural variants of the general problem have been selected for debate:

Parties and elections in new European Democracies

by Richard Rose and Neil Monroe

Have you ever experienced the frustrations of trying to find election results in a form that meets scholarly standards of accuracy and is in a language that you understand? And then tried matching parties over a series of elections in which they form, merge, split or disappear? This new book, from ECPR Press by Richard Rose and Neil Munro, does this and also includes chapters with an interactive model of elections showing the extent to which the introduction of competitive elections has not institutionalized parties but led to "floating party systems" in ten new member states of the European Union.

Eleven chapters provide a definitive text of election results and document the formation and disappearance of parties in Central and Eastern Europe from 1990 up to 2009. In addition, there is a lengthy chapter on parties and elections in Russia. Each party's name and acronym is given in its national language and translated into English with a unique number. There are also references to historical works on each country's earlier experiments with elections.

Five further chapters use election, parties and survey data to show how the supply of parties by political elites is a primary obstacle to institutionalising party systems and how this affects electors who neither trust nor identify with parties.

An invaluable and authoritative volume about elections in Central and Eastern Europe. It is timely, packed with hard-to-find facts and details, and clearly written.

Pippa Norris — Harvard University

A definitive text for election laws, parties and election results in new European democracies. As a bonus, it offers innovative model relating the supply of election laws and parties by political elites to the demands of voters. This shows that the institutionalisation of free elections leaves democracy incomplete as long as there is a floating system of parties and voters without trust.

Masters of Political Science

Edited by:
Donatella Campus & Gianfranco Pasquino

For a while now, political science as a discipline has been big enough (in terms of the number of academics) and analytically mature enough to justify reflections on and reviews of its achievements. In fact, there is no lack of general handbooks, dictionaries and 'state of the art' assessments (as well as 'reflective' journals such as the ECPR's own European Political Science), which are useful in helping us to understand and evaluate where we currently are and where we might still need to go. The focus of these texts, however, is on particular concepts, themes, research areas, institutions or behaviour. What they rarely do is indulge in a critical reflection on the political scientists themselves, especially those who are commonly accepted as having made the most significant contributions to the growth of their discipline. This book fills an important gap in the growing reflective literature on the political science discipline: it consists of a series of 'objective' profiles of the 'Masters of Political Science', written by political scientists who have read and studied their work and who are therefore in a position to evaluate the nature of their contributions.

The ten political scientists whose contributions are presented and analysed in this volume offer an overall vision of what contemporary political science has been and is today. The great thinkers whose analyses and contributions are discussed have been chosen to represent the discipline as a whole, with its various themes and its variations through geographical location, national schools and perspectives. In addition, the selection is designed to represent both American scholars and different European nations.

Joining Political Organisations by Laura Morales

Political organisations and clubs structure contemporary politics. From political parties, to environmental organisations, citizens join a host of associations to influence policy-making and the political agenda. But, why do citizens join political organisations much more in some western democracies than in others? Laura Morales explains that there are three types of participatory patterns – a North American model, with extensive membership levels and a reasonably high level of activism within organisations; a northern, or Protestant, European pattern, that combines extensive membership levels and fundamentally passive involvement; and a south European model, where low levels of membership are compensated by intense activism. Drawing on a large number of cross-national surveys and datasets, Morales shows that huge cross-national variations in political membership are not so much related to social or attitudinal differences between these countries' citizens, and are explained to a great extent by the structure of the political system of each nation.

'This is a major and ambitious study. Laura Morales manages to effect a broad ranging cross-national comparison, as well as an over-time analysis, yielding a host of valuable insights into the causes and implications of political membership.'

Political Conflict and Political Preferences by Claudia Landwehr

This book is about political conflict and political preferences and the role of communicative interaction in politics. It is also a book about deliberative democracy that addresses not so much the promise of deliberation and how it is going to be fulfilled, but rather the fundamental empirical and analytical assumptions upon which it is based. These assumptions concern rationality, political preferences and the effects of communicative interaction on preferences. Landwehr's goal has been to propose a positive theory that takes a step towards filling what are important gaps in the theory of deliberative democracy: the lack of an adequate model of preference-transformation and the lack of a theory of the effects of distinct institutional properties on interaction and actor preferences.

The book addresses what appear to be blind spots in theories of deliberative democracy: the conceptual and empirical relationship between communication and political preferences and the institutional preconditions for preference change and coordination. It proposes a model of preference transformation through communication and develops a typology of modes of political interaction that distinguishes discussion, deliberation, debate and bargaining. This serves as a framework for the analysis of a fundamental and highly polarising conflict: the German decision over the import of embryonic stem cells. Analysis of communicative interaction in different forums shows how a well justified and widely accepted compromise was achieved in a conflict that had appeared irresolvable in moral terms and irreducible in terms of interest.

The European University Institute is an international postgraduate and post-doctoral teaching and research institute established by the founding Member States of the European Communities to contribute to cultural and scientific development in the human and social sciences, in a European perspective.

The European University par excellence

First launched in 1955 at the Messina Conference, the idea of an institution aimed to extend the construction of Europe into the areas of teaching and research took shape in 1972 when, after a long series of negotiations, the Member States signed the Convention setting up the European University Institute, with its seat in Florence. Today it brings together a scientific community of 1,000 people and is one of the largest doctoral and post-doctoral programmes in the social sciences in the world.

The Institute is structured into four departments—Law, Political and Social Sciences, Economics, History and Civilization—and an interdisciplinary centre, the Robert Schuman Centre for Advanced Studies, which pursues research in the great political themes of contemporary European societies, and brings together specialists in given themes, favouring international and comparative aspects of research. In 2006, a new ambitious post-doctoral programme, named after Max Weber was launched. It welcomes 40 Fellows from all over the world. In addition, the EUI awards various post-doc fellowships granted by foundations or national authorities. The Institute also welcomes visitors for periods of up to 6 months. Within this framework, the Institute offers the Fernand Braudel Fellowships to senior Professors of international repute.

The President of the Institute is Professor Yves Mény, former Director of the Robert Schuman Centre for Advanced Studies.

The European University Institute is accommodated in a dozen buildings on the Fiesole hillside on the edge of Florence: amongst these the Badia Fiesolana, Villa Schifanoia, and Villa Il Poggiolo – the latter housing the Historical Archives of the European Union which are managed by the Institute. The Historical Archives conserve and make available to scholars the original documents of the European institutions. The Archives will find a permanent home in the near future in Villa Salviati, a splendid historical building recently purchased for this purpose by the Italian Government, which is also responsible for the full restoration and restructuring of the villa.

Every year, after a rigorous selection process, some 130 recent graduates are admitted. The course of study is structured over 4 years after which researchers who have successfully defended their thesis before an international academic examining board are awarded a research doctorate. In 2006 the Institute conferred 105 doctorates, confirming its position as a leading institution in post-doctoral studies in the social sciences.

The EUI's teaching staff comprises outstanding academics, who ensure the high quality of the training and research programmes at the Institute. Many EUI doctors are now employed at the world's best-known universities, or are officials in European Union institutions and other major international organisations. Some hold important positions in the central banks of their countries of origin, in the World Bank, International Monetary Fund or large multi-national concerns, and in the cultural and media sectors. Others hold positions in government administration, law and other professions. About one-third of EUI alumni currently work in a country which is not their country of origin.

Training and research are carried out in a stimulating multicultural environment and tackle the important themes of society with an international approach.

The European University Institute is a proud contributor and sponsor of the Fourth ECPR General Conference.

Sustainable Governance Indicators 2009 – Policy Performance and Executive Capacity in the OECD

Despite the limiting effects of growing interdependencies in a globalized world, national governments still have a considerably broad scope of action when it comes to ensuring sustainable policy outcomes. The key question is, however, to what extent governments can identify, formulate and implement effective reforms that render a society well-equipped to meet future challenges.

The goal of the “Sustainable Governance Indicators 2009” (SGI) project is to answer this question for all 30 member states of the OECD. The composite indicators used to systematically measure the need for reform and the capacity for reform in these countries will be updated biennially. The vast set of quantitative and qualitative data collected and analyzed by a network of more than 100 renowned international experts provides an unprecedented opportunity for cross-national comparative studies. This publication of the inaugural edition of the SGI includes essays on the key findings, methodology and on issues related to reform, such as the state of social justice in the OECD.

2009, 244 pp., paperback
EUR 30.00 / USD 46.00
ISBN 978-3-89204-013-0

“I am sure that the new approach taken by the SGI will foster public debate on good governance and encourage governments to further engage in peer-review mechanisms and evidence-based policymaking. Thus, the SGI is a very useful instrument for nourishing public debate and might contribute to generating societal support for change.” (Angel Gurría, OECD Secretary-General)
