Welcome from the local organisers...

Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique, political science research remains a top priority here. Our doctoral school forms future PhDs and researchers, and at two important research centres, Centre Emile Durkheim and Les Afriques dans le Monde, the ECPR spirit is highly valued: the Joint Sessions took place here in 1995 and many Standing Group meetings have been held here since.

The Institute also offers courses and research activities in law, economics, management, sociology, history, geography, foreign languages and civilisations. As a result, graduates are well versed in important contemporary matters and develop an open and inquiring mind, all the more for having at their disposal two libraries with over 500,000 items covering almost seven kilometres of shelving!

Sciences Po Bordeaux has more than 200 exchange agreements with universities throughout the world. Of special note are Universität Stuttgart, Germany; Università di Torino, Italy; Universida de Coimbra, Portugal; Universidad Autònoma de Madrid, Spain; Cardiff University in the UK and now Université Mundiapolis à Casablanca, Morocco. Sciences Po Bordeaux is also active in Russia (Moscow) and in Jamaica (West Indies University in Kingston) and helps develop French language programmes in Central and Eastern Europe through the International School of Political Studies in Katowice (Poland).

Despite (or because) of Bordeaux's excellent quality of life (wine, gastronomy, architecture, ocean, etc...), academic work here is intense, and I wish you a fruitful and inspiring General Conference.

My deepest gratitude goes to all the people and institutions involved in the preparation of this event, which is so important for the political science community in Europe, and throughout the world.

Vincent Hoffmann-Martinot

Dear Colleague

I am honoured to welcome you to the 7th ECPR General Conference here at Sciences Po Bordeaux.

Founded in 1948 by the celebrated Bordeaux political scientist Maurice Duverger, this grande école is linked closely with the University of Bordeaux, which in 2010 was made a University of Excellence under the French government's IDEX scheme. It offers a broad-based, pluridisciplinary, multilanguage curriculum across all fields of the political and social sciences.

Admission to the Institute, host to 2,000 native and international students, is by rigorous selection – a guarantee of quality. Master-Diploma courses last five years: three years of undergraduate study equip students with a broad grounding in the political and social sciences, while two graduate years focus on specialisms tailored to finding a job on completion of end-of-studies internships.

Each year, more than a hundred students pass the competitive entrance examinations for the upper echelons of the French Civil Service following training at our Preparation Centre of General Administration.

Dear Colleague

On behalf of the ECPR, welcome to the 7th General Conference at Sciences Po Bordeaux.

We hope that over the next few days you will enjoy the rich and diverse programme, which this year features more than 400 panels, the plenary lecture by Nonna Mayer on Inequalities, Welfare and Politics, two roundtables, What's So International About Political Economy? and Explaining Political Change in the South: Lessons from African Democratic Transitions and the Arab Spring, plus a number of other exciting events.

The General Conference has developed into the largest event for the ECPR – and for European political science – with over 2,000 participants, and a steadily growing number of submissions for Sections, Panels and Papers. Given this flourishing interest, the General Conference will henceforth take place annually. Calls for next year's meeting in Glasgow will go out soon.

We are grateful to all those involved in the organisation, but special thanks must go to the Section Chairs, the local organisers at Sciences Po, and ECPR Central Services.

We wish you all a great conference!

*Klaus Goetz, University of Munich
Jonas Tallberg, Stockholm University*

Klaus H Goetz holds the Chair in Political Systems and European Integration at the University of Munich. He previously taught at LSE and at the University of Potsdam. He has held Visiting Professorships at Humboldt University Berlin, the University of Tokyo, the Institute of Advanced Studies Vienna, Hebrew University Jerusalem, and Sciences Po Bordeaux, and he was a Fernand Braudel Fellow at EUI.

Professor Goetz's work focuses on the comparative analysis of European politics and public policy, with particular interest in state institutions. His most recent publications include The EU Timescape (Routledge, 2012, edited with J Meyer-Sahling) and Performing to Type? Institutional Performance in the New EU Member States, edited with R Zubek. Most recently, he was awarded a grant by the German Research Foundation to work on time rules and horizons in second chambers.

He was local organiser of the 2009 ECPR General Conference in Potsdam and has been co-editor of the journal West European Politics since 2000.

Jonas Tallberg is Professor of Political Science at Stockholm University, where he co-directs the research group on global and regional governance. His primary research interests are global governance, EU politics, and institutional theory.

Most recently, he co-authored The Opening Up of International Organizations: Transnational Access in Global Governance (CUP, 2013). He has been a visiting scholar at Harvard University, McGill University, the Social Science Research Center Berlin, the Institute for Advanced Studies Vienna, the Centre for Advanced Study Oslo, the European Commission, and the Swedish Institute of International Affairs.

Professor Tallberg has been awarded research grants from the European Research Council, the Fulbright Commission, the Humboldt Foundation, the Swedish Research Council, and the Nordic Research Academy.

He currently serves on the ECPR Executive Committee and on the Steering Committee of the ECPR Standing Group on the European Union.

About Bordeaux

The city of Bordeaux is close to the Atlantic coast, in the north of the Aquitaine region, roughly 500km southwest of Paris. It is built on a bend of the river Garonne, and is divided into the right bank to the east and left bank in the west.

Metropolitan Bordeaux contains around 1.1 million inhabitants, making it the fifth-largest city in France. In 2007 the historic part of Bordeaux was awarded UNESCO World Heritage status, in recognition of its exceptional eighteenth-century architecture.

Origins and history

Bordeaux lies on the site of a settlement founded by a Celtic tribe, who named the town Burdigala. The town fell under Roman rule around 60 BC, when it was a significant importer of tin and lead to Rome. Later, it became capital of Roman Aquitaine. Over the next few hundred years, Bordeaux was sacked by the Vandals, Visigoths and Franks, by the troops of the Andalusian Abd er Rahman, and by the Vikings.

From the twelfth to the fifteenth century, Bordeaux regained importance following the marriage of Eleanor of Aquitaine to Count Henri Plantagenet, who became Henry II of England. The wine trade flourished, and the Cathédrale Saint André was built. The Kingdom of France still suffered from instability, however, and it was to combat this that the Parliament of Bordeaux was created in 1462. Notable members of this Parliament over the centuries include Michel de Montaigne, famous author of the Essays and, two hundred years later, the great political thinker Montesquieu.

The eighteenth century was the golden age of Bordeaux. About 5,000 of the city's buildings, including those on the quays, date from this period. Victor Hugo found the town so beautiful, he commented 'take Versailles, add Antwerp, and you have Bordeaux'. Baron Haussmann is said to have based his remodelling of Paris on eighteenth-century Bordeaux. Business was booming, and traders imported exotic goods including coffee, chocolate and cotton, and exported the region's produce to the Hanseatic ports, to America and to Russia.

One of Bordeaux's efficient trams runs across the romantic Pont-de-Pierre

The economy of Aquitaine was hit hard by the blockades and requisitions of the Napoleonic Wars, then by growing English domination of maritime trade. But with the arrival of the first rail service from Paris in 1848, Bordeaux was boosted by the influx of tourists to nearby spa towns and coastal resorts.

Modern-day Bordeaux

Bordeaux has preserved its history well, and today, more than 350 of its buildings are listed as historic monuments, making the city extremely popular with tourists, and as a backdrop for period film and TV productions. In 1996, the city's prefecture launched a project to clean the sumptuous stone facades of its most exceptional historic buildings, which stretch for more than a kilometre along the Garonne in an area known as Le Port de la Lune.

Unmissable architectural highlights for the visitor include the romantic Pont-de-Pierre spanning the Garonne, the thousand-year-old Cathédrale Saint André, the neoclassical Grand Théâtre, and the Palais and Place de la Bourse – spectacular when lit up at night.

Bordeaux boasts eleven museums, including institutions dedicated to the fine, contemporary and decorative arts, natural history, archaeology, ethnography, and social and regional history.

The pedestrian-only rue Sainte-Catherine is one of the longest shopping streets in Europe, boasting 1.2 kilometres of shops, restaurants and cafés. Shops become progressively upmarket towards the Place de la Comédie.

Salut!

Bordeaux is synonymous worldwide with wine. The vine was introduced by the Romans, and wine production has been continuous in the region since Roman times. Bordeaux now has about 287,000 acres of vineyards, 10,000 wine-producing châteaux and 13,000 growers. With an annual production of approximately 960 million bottles, the wine industry employs one in six people in the Gironde. The historic Chartrons district of Bordeaux features majestic residences, cellars, and warehouses that bear witness to a time when this part of Bordeaux was the heart of the global wine trade.

The ECPR's Executive Committee

The Executive Committee (EC) is the ECPR's Board of 12 Trustees, elected by the Council every three years. Each member of the EC is elected for a six-year term, unless they are co-opted, in which case they must stand at the next election in order to continue for a further three-year term.

The terms of EC members are staggered by three years, meaning that six new members are elected every three years.

The members of the EC are drawn from the full members of the ECPR. The Chair is elected by the EC every three years at the first meeting following election.

To facilitate continuity and in recognition of the need to have a Chair experienced in ECPR business, the outgoing EC, in the preceding autumn, elects a Chair Designate from those members who have another three years to serve. This person becomes the recommended Chair to the new EC. The process ensures that the ECPR is led by someone who already has three years' experience of working on the Executive Committee, and for the ECPR.

The Executive Committee is responsible for the day-to-day running of the Consortium as well as the formulation of long-term strategic development plans and activities.

To make this task more manageable, each EC member is given a portfolio for each three-year term. Most portfolios have a sub-committee chaired by the relevant member of the EC, on which sits at least one other EC member and a counterpart from Central Services.

The Executive Committee meets at least twice a year, at the Joint Sessions of Workshops in spring and the General Conference in the autumn.

All EC members, with the exception of Knud Erik Jørgensen, will be attending this year's General Conference.

Encouraging the training,
research, and cross-
national co-operation of political scientists

About us

Established in 1970, the European Consortium for Political Research is an independent, scholarly association that supports and encourages the training, research and cross-national co-operation of political scientists through Europe and the rest of the world.

Events

To fulfil its remit, the ECPR organises a number of events each year: the Joint Sessions of Workshops, Summer and Winter Schools in Methods and Techniques, Research Sessions, and the General Conference, which from 2014, will become an annual event. A Graduate Student Conference is also held biennially; the next is 3 – 5 July 2014 in Innsbruck, Austria.

Publishing

Complementing these events, and in some cases publishing research presented at them, is the ECPR's extensive publishing portfolio.

The ECPR has its own publishing imprint, ECPR Press, and it publishes three leading journals: European Journal of Political Research, European Political Science Review, and its professional journal European Political Science.

The ECPR also publishes two high-profile book series, Comparative Politics and Research Methods, with academic publishers.

ECPR members receive print copies of all three journals and individuals enjoy significant discounts on all book series.

Standing Groups

The ECPR formalises its aim to create networking opportunities through its Standing Groups. These are groups of researchers, in many cases formed at ECPR events.

Some are small, producing only a mailing list or website; some are large, organising their own summer school or publishing their own journal.

The ECPR has more than 40 Standing Groups, covering all sub-fields of the discipline. All are eligible to apply for grants to help with organisation of their groups and the running of summer schools.

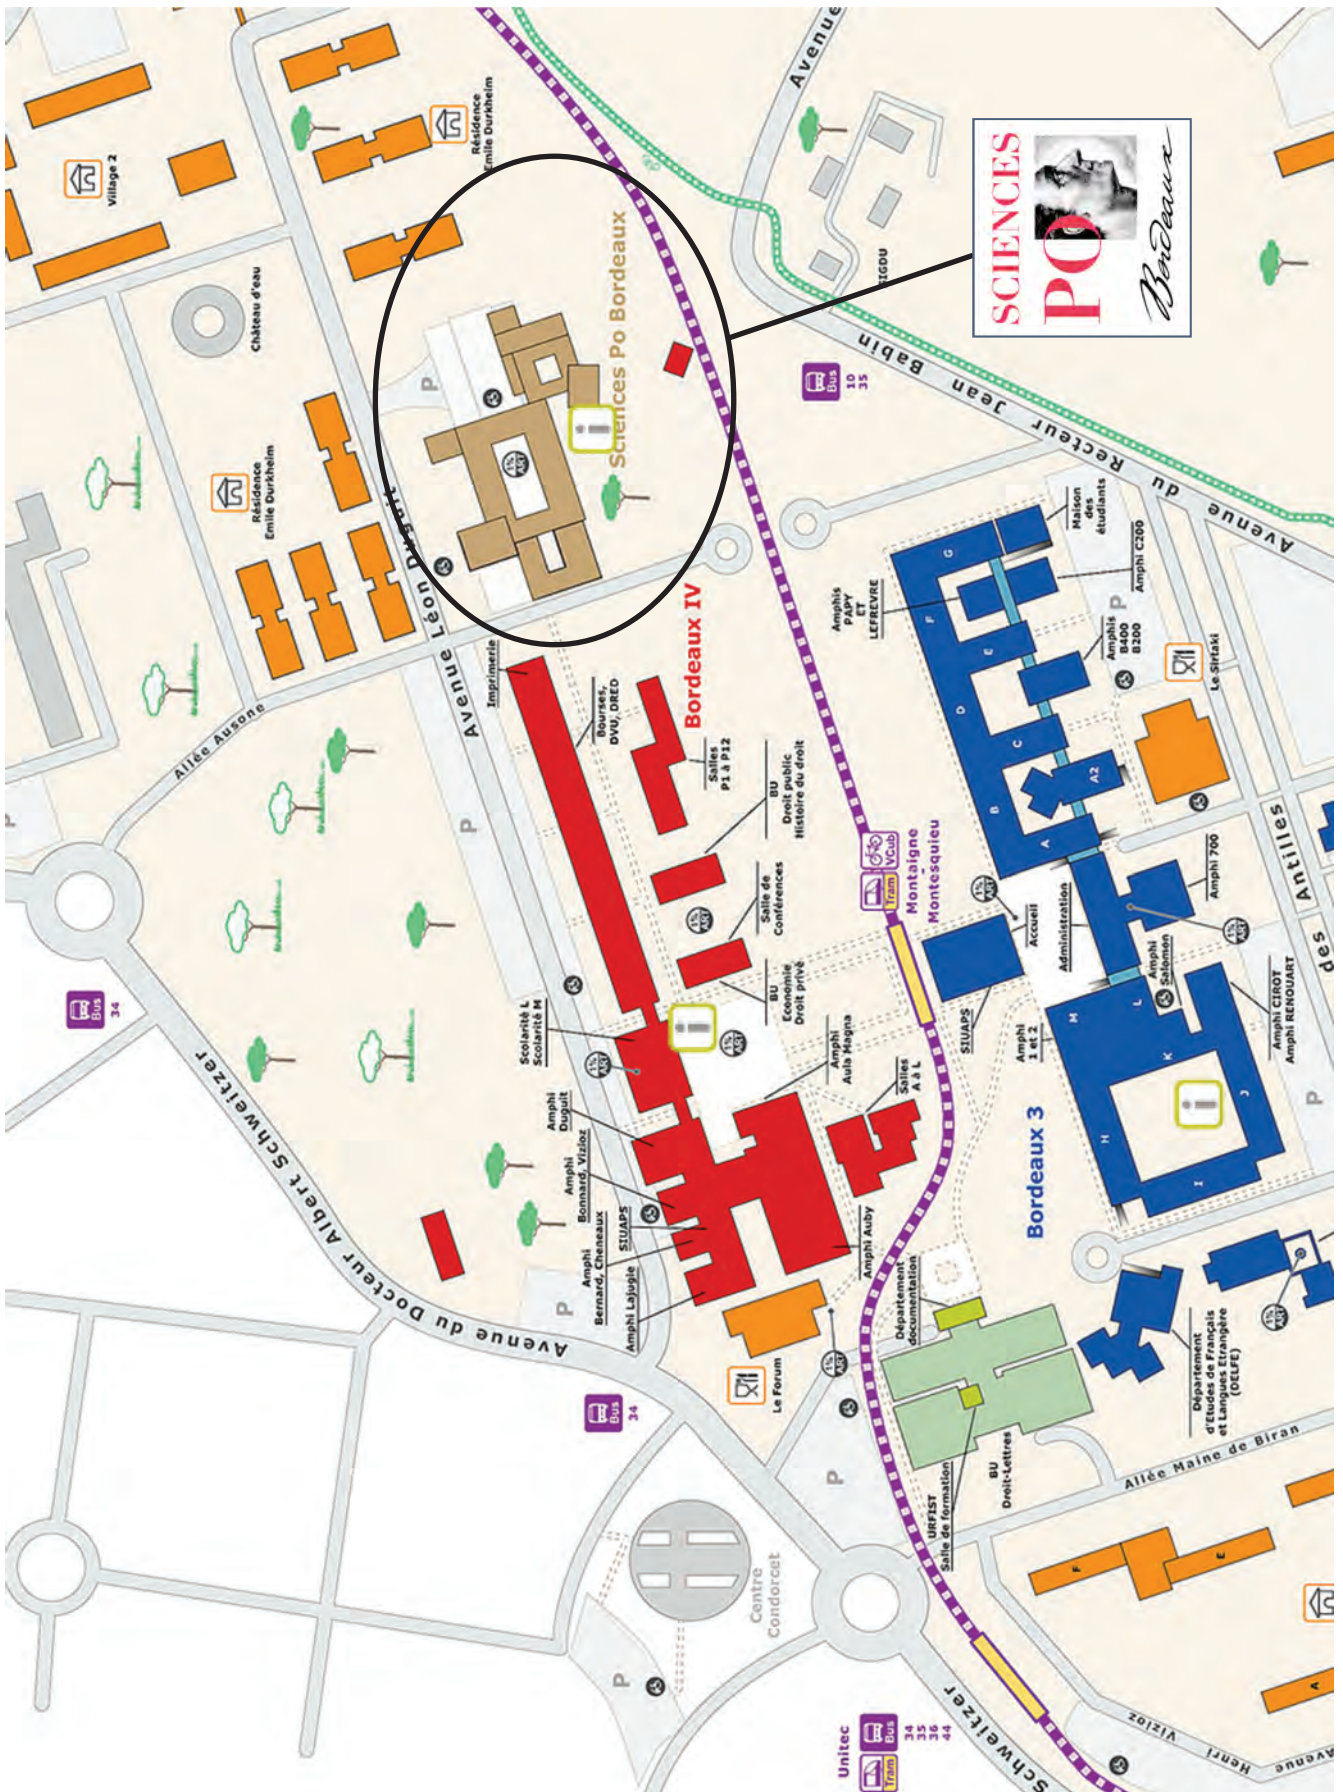

Prizes

Each year, the ECPR marks the achievements of its membership by awarding a number of prizes. These cover the spectrum of a scholar's career, from the Jean Blondel PhD Prize, for example, to the Lifetime Achievement Award.

Membership

The ECPR's membership is institutional and currently comprises some 331 universities concerned with the teaching and research of political science. However, while membership is paid by the university, it is the individuals within it who receive the benefit; from Masters and PhD students, through to the most senior professor; and from all related disciplines, not just political science.

Plenary lecture

Inequalities, Welfare and Politics – Nonna Mayer

Abstract

If the economic effects of the 2008 financial crisis have been extensively studied, there is less research on its political impact. How does social and economic insecurity affect citizens' everyday lives and attitudes towards the welfare state, public policies, and party politics? Does it fuel apathy or support for the radical right? These are some of the questions this conference will try to answer, drawing from the French case and combining survey data from the French Election Study 2012 on The Political Economy of Voting, and in-depth interviews with a sample of people on welfare.

Biography

Nonna Mayer is Research Director at the French National Centre for Scientific Research (CNRS). Her research laboratory since 2009 has been the Centre for European Studies at Sciences Po (CEE), and she teaches here on the undergraduate programme and in the Political Science Doctoral School.

Professor Mayer's main fields of expertise are the sociology of political behaviour, racism and anti-semitism and rightwing extremism. Her main ongoing research project explores the political consequences of economic insecurity and social precariousness (VotPauvr: Poor People Votes).

She has been chair of the French Political Science Association (AFSP) since 2005 and edits the series Contester (Protest) of the Presses de Sciences Po.

Her recent publications include Sociologie des comportements politiques, Paris, A. Colin (coll.U), 2010 and From Jean-Marie to Marine Le Pen: Electoral Change on the Far Right in Parliamentary Affairs – Special Issue: French Presidential and Parliamentary Elections 2012, 66(1), 2012.

Abstract

Political science generates a wealth of information about the politics of the economy, but much of this now stems only from the sub-field of International Political Economy (IPE). This roundtable aims to take stock of this trend and its implications for our discipline from two angles.

The first asks to what extent the political economy is now international. The second angle concerns the advantages and disadvantages of an intra-disciplinary division of labour which, while favouring IPE, leaves economies under-researched by the remainder of political scientists.

Abstract

Most sub-Saharan African states experienced democratic transition in the early 1990s, while many Arab countries have faced significant political changes since the end of 2010. In some of them (Tunisia, Egypt, Yemen, Libya) the autocrats in power for decades have been overthrown. In others, such as Bahrain, the authoritarian regime has been confronted by popular uprising; in Syria, by civil war. Though some political scientists have pointed to the growing social, economic and political unrest in parts of the Arab world in recent years, these uprisings went largely unpredicted by the discipline. But while their outcome remains uncertain, they have quashed forever the idea of Arab or Muslim authoritarian exceptionalism. They also question the way social sciences – particularly political science – have approached political change, authoritarianism and democratisation in the Arab world.

This roundtable will address some theoretical and epistemological questions posed to political science by Arab revolutions, in the light of African democratic transitions. It aims to suggest useful analytical elements for a better understanding of the future of these revolutions.

Mattei Dogan Prize

The Mattei Dogan Foundation Prize in European Political Sociology is awarded biennially for a major contribution to the advancement of political sociology.

The $3,000 prize is presented to either an individual scholar with an ensemble of outstanding scientific publications and constructive professional achievements, or a team of researchers currently enjoying a high reputation in the international community of political sociologists.

2013 winner

Professor Virginie Guiraudon

This year's prize is awarded to Virginie Guiraudon, Research Director at Sciences Po Paris Center for European Studies. The Jury felt that she has made a significant contribution to European political sociology through impactful research and academic activities.

A recipient of several other prestigious prizes, including the George Lavau award for best PhD on French contemporary politics and the CNRS bronze medal, Professor Guiraudon has published widely on European public policies, citizenship, immigration and multiculturalism in Europe.

Among her professional engagements, she was a founder of the political sociology research network of the European Sociological Association, she sits on the editorial board of European Political Science Review, and she is a member of the Executive Committee for the Council for European Studies.

Virginie Guiraudon holds a PhD in Government from Harvard. She has been a Marie Curie professor at the European University Institute (EUI) in Florence (Italy), Visiting Professor at the UCLA (USA), Doshisha University (Japan), UNISA (South Africa) and the CEPC (Spain). Her main interests lie in the comparative politics of immigration, citizenship and ethnicity.

In her own words...

'I was stunned and elated to learn that I had won this prize. I am extremely grateful to the colleagues who nominated me, because we work together to help political sociology thrive through Research Network 32 of the European Sociological Association. Having been trained at Harvard, I returned to Europe with a research position at the French National Center for Scientific Research where Mattei Dogan had also worked. Dogan is an inspiration for those of us who believe in building international spaces for dialogue so that the diversity of social science research traditions in Europe and beyond is better recognised as an asset. This is a key reason why I am pleased to have fostered exchanges through my role in interdisciplinary professional associations such as the Council for European Studies, and collaborative projects such as Sociology of the European Union. I also think that political sociologists are well equipped theoretically and methodologically to grasp political dynamics in times of crisis and to study state-society relations in different national and subnational contexts.

My own work has focused mainly on comparative public policies using the notion of 'venue shopping' and with an interest in the emergence of transnational policy domains. Although often thought out in a world of container-like states, classical sociological concepts have proven heuristic in understanding the emergence, institutionalisation and consequences of these meso-level sociopolitical orders that together make up 'European integration.'

I am thrilled to receive this prize in Bordeaux: it was here during the 1995 Joint Sessions that I presented my PhD fieldwork on citizenship and immigration policy, and met people I still work with today.'

Lifetime Achievement Award

This €5,000 award is given biennially to a scholar who has made an outstanding contribution to European political science.

2013 winner

Professor Ian Budge

The Jury for the 2013 award met during the Joint Sessions of Workshops in March, and awarded the prize to Professor Ian Budge, Professor Emeritus at the University of Essex.

Ian Budge's academic career began at the University of Edinburgh, where he completed a Master's in History, before studying political science at Yale.

Scholars may recognise his name as co-author of well-known titles including The New British Politics, and Mapping Policy Preferences. But few may be aware of the substantial contribution he has made to the development of the field, in particular democratic theory and practice.

The Jury felt Professor Budge had made an outstanding contribution to European political science over a number of decades, through international research projects, and through his research monographs and scholarly production.

The Jury also praised Professor Budge's commitment to the development of comparative politics, especially through his activities as Chair of EUI in Florence, and his substantial contribution to his home institution (the University of Essex), as Chair of Department, Director of Graduate Studies and principal adviser to PhD students.

In his own words...

'I chose to do political science as a bit of a change, really; thinking of it as applied history. Instead I found teachers who talked of creating a real science of politics – a vision that blew my mind and which I have continued to pursue ever since.

The individuals who most influenced me were Harold Lasswell and Robert Dahl (my supervisor at Yale), and later, Donald Stokes. Jean Blondel's comparative politics and vision of European political science were inspirational and gave me concrete institutional goals to pursue when I returned to Europe.

I was inspired by the expansion and flowering of a truly European political science between 1968 and 1980. In the late sixties there was practically no contact between political scientists in different European countries. First, the Essex Summer School and then the ECPR changed all that.

In 1970 it was an adventure even to have a research meeting at Sciences Po! But by the mid-seventies we were holding Joint Sessions all over Europe and forming research networks to continue their work.

[Directorship of ECPR, 1973–1983 gave me] a wide acquaintanceship across Europe which enabled me to form networks – above all the Manifesto Research Group – to gather the comparative data necessary to check out theories of party behaviour and party competition.

Most of my books have been collaborative projects developing theories and checking them against comparative evidence.

With Hans Keman, Michael D McDonald and Paul Pennings I have just published Organising Democratic Choice, a systematic theory (with supporting evidence) of how democracy works. With the Manifesto Research team at the Wissenschaftszentrum, Berlin we are publishing Mapping Policy Preferences from Texts this year with Oxford University Press.

Currently I am writing a textbook – Politics – with Michael D McDonald, my longstanding colleague.'

Stein Rokkan Prize

This prize for Comparative Social Science Research is presented by the International Social Science Council (ISSC), the University of Bergen and the European Consortium for Political Research (ECPR). Thanks to the generosity of the University of Bergen, this $5,000 prize will now be awarded on an annual basis. Open to all social science disciplines, it is given to a submission deemed by the Jury to be a substantial and original contribution to the field. The 2013 Prize will be awarded at the World Social Science Forum 13–15 October, Montreal, Canada www.wssf2013.org

Professors Dorothee Bohle and Béla Greskovits

Dorothee Bohle is Professor of Political Science at Central European University, Budapest. She specialises in the comparative political economy of Eastern Europe, with a focus on welfare regimes, industrial relations and tiny states. She is co-author of Capitalist Diversity on Europe's Periphery, and her work has appeared in Studies in Comparative International Development, West European Politics, Journal of Democracy, European Journal of Sociology, and Review of International Political Economy, among others. She received her PhD from Free University of Berlin, and was a Fernand Braudel Fellow at European University Institute, Florence.

Béla Greskovits is Professor of International Relations and European Studies at Central European University. His research interests are in social movements and protest, and the political economy of policy reform and transnational integration in Eastern Europe. He is author of The Political Economy of Protest and Patience, and co-author of Capitalist Diversity on Europe's Periphery. He has published in International Politics, Studies in Comparative International Development, Labor History, West European Politics, European Journal of Sociology, and Journal of Democracy. He received his PhD from the Hungarian Academy of Sciences, and held the Luigi Einaudi Chair at Cornell University.

In their own words...

'Winning this prize is a great honour for us. Rokkan has always been one of our intellectual heroes, and we drew inspiration from the breadth and depth of his comparative historical approach. We hope that this recognition will foster interest in a region we feel passionate about, Eastern Europe, and in Karl Polanyi's work.'

General Conference book exhibition

All the publishers below will be selling their wares in our book show. Follow the signs to the book exhibition, and take advantage of some great promotions!

	ECPR Press publishes original research from leading political scientists and the best young scholars in the discipline. Launched in 2005, we make available high-quality research in all fields of political science, without restriction in approach or regional focus. All our publications are peer reviewed. The ECPR Press catalogue offers four series: Essays, Studies in European Political Science, Monographs and Classics. www.ecpr.eu/ecprpress
	Founded in 2004, Barbara Budrich Publishers are convinced that most problems faced by the world's societies can be explained, and solved, with the knowledge of social sciences. Demographic change, migration, integration, social and educational inequality – just a few of the vast issues social sciences help to address. Would it not be in everybody's best interest to introduce social sciences to those halls of power where they could contribute to a more livable global society? www.budrich-verlag.de
	OUP is one of the world's leading publishers in political science, publishing outstanding original work across many key areas of the discipline, from international relations to political theory. Journals include the Journal of Refugee Studies, Parliamentary Affairs, and Political Analysis. We have political science modules in Oxford Scholarship Online, Oxford Bibliographies, and University Press Scholarship Online. Our authoritative series of Oxford Handbooks in Politics and IR is also available online. www.oup.com
	Palgrave Macmillan is a global academic publisher of monographs, journals, reference works and professional titles, online and in print. Economic Knowledge in Regulations

Lorna Schrefler

Conventional wisdom says that the autonomy and reputation of regulatory agencies depend on their expertise. Indeed, the standard justification for delegating decision-making to these agencies is that they use technical analysis uninfluenced by politics. But how do IRAs acquire and deploy their knowledge? Lorna Schrefler investigates.

Greece in the Euro: Economic Delinquency or System Failure?

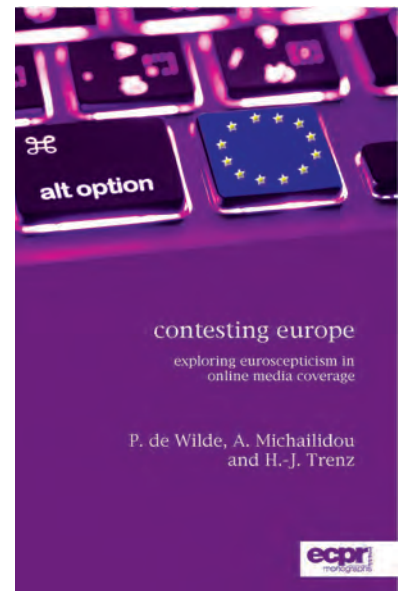

Eleni Panagiotarea

Greece banked on EMU. Entry into the eurozone was its ticket to macroeconomic stability, its modernisation jacket and its gateway to global markets. So how did such a promising start turn to dust so quickly? Was Greece the delinquent of the eurozone – or the first victim of the euro's system failure?

Organising the European Parliament

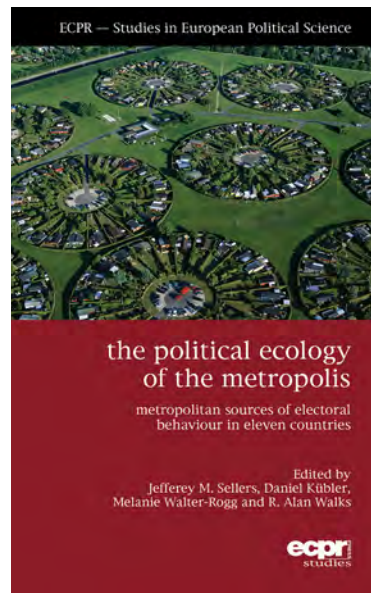

Nikoleta Yordanova

Reveals how parliamentary committees' internal setup and legislative output are engineered to serve the policy goals of political parties, and shows how the improvement in legitimacy, transparency and accountability of the EU that the committee work brings is threatened by informal, bicameral decision-making.

Democratic Institutions and Authoritarian Rule in Southeast Europe

Danijela Dolenc

More than twenty years after the collapse of communism, why has democratisation in southeast Europe disappointed initial expectations? Dolenc argues that democratisation has been stifled by the nondemocratic practices of dominant authoritarian parties, which continue to subvert the rule of law today.

Controlling Corruption in Europe

The Anticorruption Report, vol. 1

This first policy report from the EU's largest framework grant for social sciences, ANTICORRP, shows the multiple consequences of corruption in European Union member states. Including an analysis on fiscal deficit, vulnerable employment, gender equality, government spending, tax collection, electoral turnout and brain drain, it proves that corruption is not a marginal phenomenon, but a central factor to understanding the EU's current state.

International Relations

A Self-Study Guide to Theory

The book is written for active learners – those keen on cutting their own path through the complex and at times hardly comprehensible world of THEORY in International Relations. To aid this process as much as possible, this book employs the didactical and methodical concept of integrating teaching and self-study.

The World of Political Science: A Critical Overview of the Development of Political Studies around the Globe: 1990-2012

The World of Political Science:
The development of the discipline Book Series

How well is the field of political studies doing and where is it headed? These questions are answered by this broad world overview of political science, its advances and shortcomings, along with prescriptions for the future in the first decades of the 20th century. The volume includes three world regional assessments of the discipline by senior scholars along with an in-depth survey of various sub-disciplinary fields and a concluding critical essay on the future of political studies.

Growing Into Politics: Contexts and Timing of Political Socialisation

Simone Abendschön

How do people find their place in the political community? Who learns what from whom, under what circumstances, and with what effects? This book suggests new approaches and answers, discussing the relative importance of agents and contexts, and the timing of political socialisation. Articles shed light on these topics from a European perspective, using new methodological approaches and/or dealing with long-neglected perspectives.

Transnational Policy Innovation

Fabrizio De Francesco

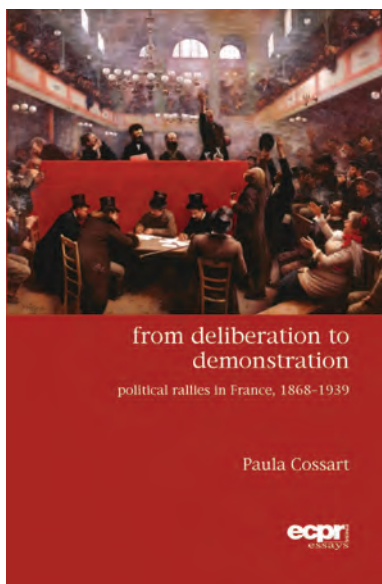

This book analyses the role of the OECD in diffusing policy innovations. Drawing on original data sets, three empirical analyses assess to what extent government decisions to adopt, implement, and evaluate RIA were driven by the OECD.

From Deliberation to Demonstration: Political Rallies in France, 1868–1939

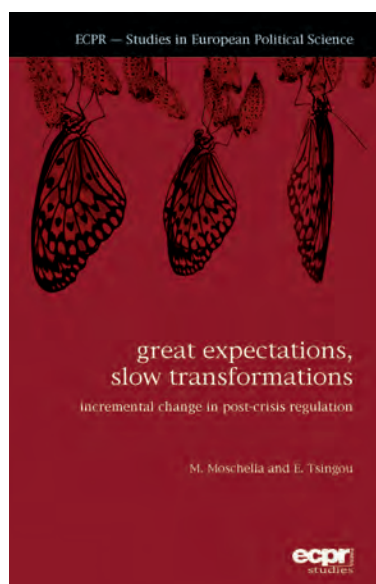

Paula Cossart

This book, at the crossroads of history and political science, shows how political rallies, designed as a place to learn citizenship and form opinion through public debate, were transformed into demonstrations of strength.

Political history of a new kind, focused not so much on ideology and voter behaviour as practices and technologies. Makes for compelling reading

MAX-PLANCK-INSTITUT FÜR GESELLSCHAFTSFORSCHUNG
MAX PLANCK INSTITUTE FOR THE STUDY OF SOCIETIES

The Max Planck Institute for the Study of Societies \(MPIfG\) conducts advanced basic research on the governance of modern societies. It aims to develop an empirically based theory of the social and political foundations of modern economies by investigating the interrelation between economic, social and political action. Using primarily an institutional approach, it examines how markets and business organizations are embedded in historical, institutional, political and cultural frameworks, how they develop, and how their social contexts change over time. The institute seeks to build a bridge between theory and policy and to contribute to political debate on major challenges facing modern societies.

The MPIfG is part of a worldwide network of research institutions and researchers in the social sciences. It cooperates closely with several research institutes abroad, including Sciences Po and CEPREMAP in Paris, the Institute for Policy Research and the Departments of Sociology and Political Science at Northwestern University in Evanston, the Center for European Studies and the Department of Sociology at Harvard University and the Department of Political Science at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The MPIfG has three publication series: MPIfG Books, MPIfG Discussion Papers and MPIfG Journal Articles.
